Dear Private Eye,

On Thursday, 16th June, I dropped by your offices at about 16:40. I spoke to the two ladies in the ground floor room (on the right from the entrance) and left a red dossier pertaining to my case in the High Court.

I have informed those ladies that I have been severely assaulted and survived an assassination attempt and that I would like to talk to someone. They informed me that there was no one around to speak to. This was despite the fact that a man came downstairs twice and there seemed to be some sort of meeting going on upstairs referred to as the Writers' Meeting by one of the ladies who answered the phone during my short stay at your offices.

I am writing to ask if a journalist has received this dossier and if Mr Ian Hislop has seen its contents. My case is rather important because it is one example of a string of egregious crimes being committed, in which innocent citizens (a lot of them scientists and researchers) are exposed to an insane intimidation campaign, tortured and some even killed.

As I wrote to you, my case is very sensitive and I really would like to talk to you before any of the contents of the dossier is used as material for an article. There is an enormous background; and someone with a lot of experience needs to handle it. This is why I absolutely urge Mr Hislop to look at the contents of my dossier himself and please get in touch with me. I left my number with you.

Please, get on the case. I am alone and terrified. And I am fearing not just for my own life but also that of my family and friends.

Please just let me know if you got this.

Katherine Horton
